"CLEMIS" Tested

Originally printed at <http://www.tv20detroit.com/news/53699072.html>

Getting criminals off the street will become a bit easier tonight in Oakland County. Take a look at "CLEMIS". The Sheriff's Office unveiled it this afternoon. Officers will only need a fingerprint of a person they have stopped. It will take "CLEMIS" 35 seconds to determine if the person is wanted. Representatives of other law enforcement agencies joined them to demonstrate how it works.

Sheriff Mike Bouchard/Oakland Co. Sheriff's Office

"For the person that is actually doing something they are trying to hide from it, that will be quickly brought to bear. For the person that forgot their drivers license at home and is stammering with a good answer to the questions, it'll allow them to get back on their way."

The Sheriff tells us "CLEMIS" can check 665 images a second. "CLEMIS" will soon be in use at 125 agencies in six Michigan counties.
