

Dear Medical Main Street Network Members:

We wanted you to have some advance notice on an Oakland University event we are sponsoring again this year:

Oakland University – School of Health Sciences

Healthology | 2020 Symposium

November 12 | 5:30 p.m.

Beyond COVID-19: Igniting Innovation in Health

The focus of this event is on the creative solutions developed across different health sectors in response to the unique challenges of this pandemic. While COVID-19 is causing great individual harm, this disruption is also harming society— affecting the delivery of services, exposing or exacerbating health care inequities, and revealing a lack of fairness and preparedness.

The event will explore what we have learned, the innovative solutions that are now being implemented and how will we be better prepared moving forward.

In this exciting 2020 edition, stories will be shared from diverse health leaders who, through creative problem-solving and fortitude, have adapted and responded to the public health crisis in the face of adversity, turning challenges into opportunities. These are stories not just of survivors but of thrivers.

This event is virtual and free of charge. You can register at:

Healthology is open to the public; so, we encourage you to share the attached print-ready flyer with others you think would be interested. Where science, practice and social interests meet, Healthology celebrates impactful research and collaborative approaches for addressing upstream social determinants of health, in achieving better downstream care.

Best of regards,

Dom Holmes
