

LUNCH & LEARN

When an Online Allied Health Sciences Degree Makes Sense for Your Students

Join us for a virtual Lunch & Learn designed for community college advisors and college access professionals who support students navigating flexible bachelor's degree completion options. We will discuss when a Bachelor of Science in Allied Health Sciences (AHS) makes sense for your students and explore how it compares to other degree pathways. Using GVSU's AHS programs as a framework, we will highlight how these programs are designed to complement associate-level professional education in health-related fields, offering fully online completion, career advancement, and a foundation for graduate study. The session will include ample time for questions and shared discussion.
