Good employees are invaluable and keeping them is a priority.

Oakland County Michigan Works! has partnered with the Oakland Livingston Human Service Agency (OLHSA) to launch the Business Resource Network (BRN), a new program for employers that addresses a variety of concerns causing employee turnover and disengagement.

The BRN is an employer-led solution with a common interest: employee retention. The network of businesses has access to a Success Coach that connects employees with a variety of barrier-busting resources, enabling them to reduce stress, stay focused and employed. Additionally, the BRN will collaborate to solve large-scale retention issues impacting the group.

Oakland County is but one of several areas around the state with BRN programs.

How does the BRN program work?

A company pays an annual membership fee and its employees gain onsite and remote access to an assigned OLHSA success coach. The coach works with employees on an individual basis, connecting them with the services they need. The goal is to keep your employees happy and on the job.
